

Product analytics is the process of measuring and analyzing how users engage with a product.

The goal is to use this data to continuously improve the product.